Bainfall and Drought.

Our next best chance for local rainfalls in Texas is about the 21st July. We get these dates from Pro'. Ira Hicks and Prof. James Beeson rain charts.

21st July is an equinox of the planet Venus, which is clearly marked by atmospheric disturbances in the Western and Middle states. Prof. Hicks says: "The equinor of Venus may affect the atmosphere for a period of ten days before and five days after, but usually the disturbance is a day or two before the equinox and a day or two later." Now let us all observe, and see what the equinox of Veous will do in Texas.
Our trade has been out short by
